Ramona Abbott Kathy Kershner I'd be quite surprised if the HR departments at all of the places Mr. Sidhu had worked, including BTC and the Whatcom County Election Division of the Auditor's Office, all had not checked citizenship carefully.

Bert Monroe Kathy Kershner He was an employee not an owner. You know that. You actually defend companies and their owners who do real environmental damage. It's sad you hypocritically attacking Satpal Sidhu. <http://nwcitizen.com/entry/smear-campaign>

Kathy Kershner Ramona Abbott There is no requirement to check citizenship if he has permanent resident status. The County Elections do not check citizenship status. The candidate simply signs a document stating they meet the requirements to run for office. The longer Sidhu stalls on providing proof, the more suspicious this looks.

Remember, the young man who shot and killed five people in the Burlington Mall was not a citizen, but he had registered to vote and had voted in elections (illegally). Our system has been intentionally designed to not verify citizenship when registering to vote. It relies only on the applicant's signature but no proof is required.

Sidhu may very well be a citizen but he never mentioned it in either the 2014 or 2015 campaign. There is no public record of his citizenship. I would think that it would have made a great campaign story and he would have at least made a statement about how proud he was of becoming a citizen and now running for public office, etc.... Let's see if he will put this issue to bed by releasing some form of documentation of citizenship status.

Sandra Karpstein Teichert I don't feel Kathy Kershner is running a "smear campaign". Her questions are legitimate and everyone deserves to know the truth. The fact that Satpal left TreOil a few months before they ran into problems with violations seemed more than coincidental t... See More
